As an American citizen having watched this case go on and on for far too many years at the urging of Microsoft's primary competitors, it is time it is put to bed. The settlement is fair and reasonable. While the competitors may still be complaining, there has never been any proof that consumers have been harmed in any way. Let's stay focused on the consumer and encourage big corporate tech companies to do so as well. They and all of us would be better served by better products, than by more law suits.

Approve the settlement. Let Microsoft get back to doing what it does best, serving their customers.
